

LIVE BEFORE YOU DIE

YOUR FOUNDER SCORECARD PROFILE

The Lone Operator

Winning at work. Alone everywhere else.

Your 7-day plan from the Founder Scorecard

YOUR PROFILE

The Lone Operator

Your output is real. But the people closest to you are getting what's left of you, and that gap is quietly capping your performance.

You've built something most people never will. You show up, you deliver, you carry the weight. At work, you're the one everyone counts on.

But somewhere along the way, everything outside work started running on autopilot. You're physically home and mentally in Slack. The people who matter most get the version of you that's already spent. Friendships have shrunk to business contacts, and nobody really knows how you're doing.

> Relationships are a performance variable, and they're the one high performers get wrong most.

This isn't a character flaw. It's a pattern a lot of driven founders run, and it's one that starts to shift the moment you put real attention on it.

You can't outperform your home life.

WHAT IT'S COSTING YOU

Wins that don't land

Wins that don't land, because there's no one to really share them with, and a tank that never fully refills.

Your energy

Every high performer runs on a limited amount of energy and attention. Home either refills that tank every night or quietly drains it all day. When the people closest to you feel shut out, something is always running in the background: the conversation you're avoiding, the tension you walk back into.

Your decisions

A distracted, depleted mind makes worse calls on hires, deals and strategy. One bad call can cost more than every late night saved.

Your wins

You hit the number you used to dream about and feel almost nothing, because there's no one to really share it with.

Your why

When work becomes the easier place to be, you stop building because you love it and start building because it's easier than going home. It looks like dedication. It's escape.

If home is draining you, you're filling a bucket with a hole in it.

YOUR 7-DAY PLAN

One move a day

One action a day. Small on purpose. The goal isn't to change everything this week. It's to prove to yourself that the gap can close.

1

YOUR PROFILE MOVE

Tonight, before you say a word about the business, tell someone you love one true thing about how your week actually felt.

2

CONNECTION

In a relationship: Pick three nights this week. Phone in another room from the moment you walk in until your partner goes to bed. Ask one real question each night and hear the full answer.

Single: This week, call two people outside work who matter to you. Not a text. Tell each of them one real thing you're dealing with right now.

3

PURPOSE

This week, finish this sentence and put it where you'll see it every morning: "Everything I'm building is for ___." If you can't finish it, that's your answer.

4

PERFORMANCE

This week: no caffeine after noon and no screens in the last 30 minutes before bed. Rate your energy 1 to 10 each morning, then compare day 1 to day 7.

5

TIME

For three days, write down every task you do. Circle the ones only you can do. By Friday, delegate, automate or delete one of the rest.

6

REST AND NOTICE

No new action today. Notice what changed: your evenings, your energy, how the people closest to you responded. Write down one thing you want to keep.

7

RETAKE AND COMPARE

Retake the Founder Scorecard and compare your four scores to the first time. Then start the 30-day retake on the next page.

THE 30-DAY RETAKE

Track the ten that matter

These are the ten core questions from the Founder Scorecard. Rate each 1 to 5 today, then again in 30 days. The gap is your proof.

		TODAY	30 DAYS
1	I can explain clearly what my success is ultimately for.
2	When I hit a big goal, I feel genuinely fulfilled, not just relieved.
3	My relationship with my partner is strong right now. Single: My closest relationships are strong right now.
4	My partner would say I'm fully present when I'm home. Single: When I'm with people I care about, I'm fully present, not in my phone or in my head about work.
5	I have at least two people outside work who know what I'm really going through.
6	I wake up with energy most days without relying on caffeine.
7	I can do 2+ hours of deep, focused work most days.
8	I sleep well and wake up rested.
9	I spend most of my week on work only I can do.
10	I feel in control of my calendar.

Score it honestly. A low number today isn't a verdict. It's your starting line.
